JETNET iQ Announces IADA and CAM Program Credits for Attendees

UTICA, NY – JETNET, the leading provider of corporate aviation information, announces a partnership with the International Aircraft Dealers Association (IADA) and the National Business Aviation Association (NBAA) to offer continuing education (CE) credits to qualified members attending the 2024 JETNET iQ Global Business Aviation Summit. The Summit takes place September 24-25 at the New York Marriott Marquis in Times Square.

“We're excited to partner with IADA and NBAA to provide their members with this valuable opportunity,” states Rolland Vincent, JETNET iQ Creator and Director. “This intimate and influential aviation event allows attendees to earn CE credits while gaining insights from industry leaders.”

Qualified members of IADA's Certified Broker program and NBAA's Certified Aviation Manager (CAM) program will be eligible for credits, including those seeking initial certification or recertification.

“IADA continually seeks innovative methods to offer valuable learning opportunities for Certified Brokers fulfilling annual CE requirements,” said Erika Ingle, IADA's Managing Director. “The JETNET iQ Summit offers members a prime opportunity to gain unique insights into critical industry topics, alongside networking with industry leaders in an intimate setting.”

“NBAA CAM members are expected to maintain a high standard of industry knowledge and expertise,” said Jo Damato, CAM, the National Business Aviation Association's (NBAA) Senior Vice President of Education, Training & Workforce Development. “As innovators shaping the future of business aviation, the JETNET iQ Summit provides our CAM members the perfect opportunity to demonstrate their commitment to excellence while igniting inspiration and fostering collaboration with industry veterans and newcomers alike.”

To further incentivize participation, JETNET is offering a 10% discount to qualified IADA and NBAA members who register for the 2024 iQ Summit. Members will receive a special promo code via email from their respective organization to utilize during registration and benefit from this exclusive offer.
